A significant donation from Emeritus Professor Dorothy Scott has tipped the Gavin Wanganeen Indigenous Scholarship funds over $200,000. The recently retired Director and founder of the Centre for Child Protection at UniSA, Emeritus Professor Scott was inspired by the Vice Chancellor’s support of rural scholarships, and commented;

“I think it is important for those of us who have received so many benefits from higher education to think about the ways in which we might be able to give back to the community.”

Emeritus Professor Scott was the first person from her family to have the opportunity of a university education. To succeed she depended on scholarships that provided much needed support. Her experience has given her a first-hand appreciation of just how important such assistance is in enabling students to concentrate on their studies.

Emeritus Professor Scott recognised that the family structure and traditional culture of Aboriginal students often involves additional responsibilities, making it even more challenging for them to honour their personal commitments, complete their studies and take on part-time employment. She felt that she could make a difference by financing a scholarship scheme that expressed the core values of equity and social justice, themes that Emeritus Professor Scott proudly acknowledges are encompassed at UniSA.

She also recognises that the scholarship encourages community engagement. Recipients actively participate in events and share their knowledge to promote advancement in Indigenous education and career opportunity, experiences that Emeritus Professor Scott believes build confidence. She notes,

“What really appeals to me about the Gavin Wanganeen Indigenous Scholarship is the opportunity it gives to emerging leaders in the Aboriginal community.”

To date two Gavin Wanganeen Indigenous Scholarship recipients have completed their degrees and are now working in their chosen professions. Patricia Waria-Read is enjoying being a role model and an elder in her position at the Aboriginal Prisoners and Offenders Support Service. Nathan Agius is completing his first year as a teacher at the John Pirie Secondary School and has recently been appointed to an Aboriginal Teachers and Leaders Advisory Board. Both attribute their success to the skills learnt at UniSA and the additional confidence gained from receiving the support of the scholarship.

Three more recipients will finish their studies in 2010. Wendy Barth will complete a Bachelor of Nursing; Robert Hawkins will complete a Bachelor of Visual Arts (Specialisation) and Justin Canuto, the inaugural recipient of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources sponsored Gavin Wanganeen Indigenous Scholarship, will complete a Bachelor of Arts (Aboriginal Studies). We look forward to celebrating their graduations and hearing their stories as they embark on their careers and next adventures.

With the help of all the donors who have enabled the success of these students, UniSA is proud to have raised funds to continue the Gavin Wanganeen Indigenous Scholarship into the future.

For more information about the Gavin Wanganeen Indigenous Scholarship, contact Helen Black, 8302 0974 or helen.black@unisa.edu.au
Flight of a bird, life in performance

An exploration of risk through ephemeral performance, video and sculptural installation.

Celebrating the life and works of Linda Lou Murphy, this exhibition was displayed at the SASA Gallery in July 2010.

“Flight of a bird, life in performance proposes more subtle and continuing relations between risk, the performed body and its products / artefacts. This is possible ‘using the very shapes and movements’ that the artist has entrusted to us... Because this work continues to endure, it is entirely possible that this and future events celebrating Linda Lou Murphy’s breathtaking oeuvre will again ‘take wing’.”

Pamela Zeplin, Senior Lecturer UniSA

The late Linda Lou Murphy was a Masters student, colleague and friend at the School of Art, Architecture & Design, UniSA.

The power of remembrance

Late last year the School of Art, Architecture and Design received news that a friend, alumnus and prominent artist had lost her fight against cancer. The positive side of this very sad situation was the news that Linda Patterson, known as the artist Linda Lou Murphy, had made provision in her Will to establish a scholarship at UniSA to assist future artists. Those who knew Linda believe that this is a very special way to celebrate her life and share her passion.

This caused me to reflect on the backgrounds of our valued scholarships. For example, through the development of the Irene and David Davy Scholarship for Advancement of Aboriginal Education, current members of the Davy family continue the legacy of their relatives who so encouraged, supported and inspired younger generations to follow their dreams and pursue higher education. The named scholarship, awarded annually since 2000, honours Irene and David as inspirational role models with their belief that with support, encouragement and access to education, financially disadvantaged youth could create worthwhile future pathways.

Among many other named scholarships and prizes which honour lives, we are also fortunate to have The Zero Waste SA Pam Keating Memorial Scholarship, which was established in memory of Pam Keating, a noted environmentalist and waste management expert who passionately believed in the importance of reducing waste and its impact on our environment. Pam was also committed to education and training for sustainability.

However, recognition through named scholarships need not only be given after death! A number of organisations have recently celebrated and marked milestones by expressing commitment to their industry and to supporting future professionals within their fields.

For example Resthaven, a public benevolent aged care community service of the Uniting Church in Australia, has celebrated their 75th Anniversary by establishing 10 nursing scholarships at UniSA to be awarded over the next three years, as well as the Resthaven Undergraduate Indigenous Nursing Scholarship, which will be awarded every two years in perpetuity. These scholarships are a wonderful way for Resthaven to celebrate their success, advocate the value of working with older people, and make a significant and practical contribution to the wider community.

Community CPS, a leading Australian Credit Union, have also marked a special occasion by establishing a named scholarship with the UniSA Division of Business. Community CPS decided that the retirement of Chief Executive Officer Kevin Benger in February 2010 should be commemorated. The organisation has honoured his 12 years of service by offering the Kevin Benger Community CPS Scholarship to support a commencing finance student in 2011 for the duration of their program.

Similarly, Codan, a local Adelaide company leading the world in the design and manufacture of high frequency radios, satellite radio subsystems, and metal detectors, decided to celebrate their 50 years of operation by rewarding an engineering student in their fourth year, or undertaking honours study, with the Codan 50th Anniversary Engineering Scholarship. Awarded annually from 2010, the scholarship is designed to inspire students to embark on research projects in radio frequency engineering or wireless communications technology, areas that celebrate both the successful history of Codan and their vision for the future.

As an interesting development, I heard from our University Librarian that many friends of UniSA have used the Library bookplate donation scheme as a tribute to their loved ones. Having a bookplate customised with personal details and placed in the front of a newly purchased book provides both greater resources for students and the acknowledgment of those who support education.

There are many ways we can all show our support – what would you like your legacy to be?

Irene & David Davy Scholarship 2009 recipient Treena Clark and 2010 recipient Jessica Tsimeris with Associate Professor Margaret Davy and trustee Shauna Henty.
An inspiring generation

When UniSA students are awarded a scholarship or grant they often comment that the award is a welcome vote of confidence which strengthens their desire to make a real contribution to society. A number of these students have recently shared their experiences, showing that they are well on the path to being exemplary role models.

Alison James recently completed her international placement in Singapore with World Vision as part of the UniSA Hawke Ambassador Program. Alison was delighted to be awarded one of the 2010 Cowan International Placement Grants for Hawke Ambassador which funded her trip. Currently in her third year of Bachelor of Management and Bachelor of Arts (International Studies), the placement provided first-hand experience and an introduction to an international aid organisation. Alison reflected on receiving this opportunity and noted that “…studying at university is so much more than graduating with a piece of paper - it is about learning new knowledge that you will be able to use to make this world a better place, making a real difference in the lives of those around us, and those in other countries who struggle with poverty and situations of injustice.”

Another emerging young leader and role model Tessa Henwood-Mitchell, was invited to attend the Brightest Young Minds Summit 2010 in Sydney after being awarded the City of Adelaide’s 2010 Young Citizen of the Year. Tessa, a University of South Australia (UniSA) student, was invited to attend the Brightest Young Minds Summit in July with other young leaders to progress humanity created a network of contacts for Tessa. This connection ignited new strength for her and after the Summit she noted “It was an incredible experience, and I have come away from it feeling very inspired and mobilised to make real tangible social change, and to become a socially responsible leader of now and the future. It has provided me with the knowledge, motivation and self-belief to further develop and expand my work with the organisation I founded last year (Tia International Aid).”

This goodwill has a flow on effect. By sharing their experiences, past recipients also inspire the next generation of students. Treena Clark, a UniSA graduate and Honours student and last year’s recipient of the Irene & David Davy Scholarship for Advancement of Aboriginal Education recently presented at the Aboriginal Student Pathways Conference. Treena was one of a number of Aboriginal role models who were chosen to present to students in years 10, 11 and 12. The aim was to encourage the students to stay at school and complete a South Australian Certificate in Education (SACE). Treena welcomed the chance to share her story having completed the UniSA Foundation Studies before going on to graduate with a Bachelor of Public Relations. One of the contributors to the conference said “Treena’s presentation was one of the highlights at the conference, you could see from the students’ eyes the growing expectations and excitement. It was also a delight to see Treena providing that personal touch after the presentation, answering questions from both students and their parents.”

Jess Allison is an example of a current student and a scholarship recipient drawing on her own life experience as a rural student to become a mentor. Now well into her Bachelor of Applied Science (Occupational Therapy), Jess acknowledges that there were many challenges for a country girl in adjusting to both life at UniSA and to life in the city. She credits the support of the Don Hawke Memorial Scholarship as being the deciding factor to pursue higher education. Willing to share her experience and make the decision less confronting for rural students, Jess was delighted to serve on a discussion panel for the Rural Reconnect University Orientation Program. The three day program at UniSA has been designed to highlight pathways for Year 10 country high school students and inspire rural school leavers to access higher education. Jess believes that “It was really important to be able to share some of the challenges I have faced in transitioning from the country to the city. I felt that sharing personal experiences can really help encourage and support country kids in their future decisions.”

These inspirational students are achieving their goals and in return are actively promoting the virtues of a university education. As the next round of hopeful Year 12 students apply for their preferred course, they can be comforted in knowing that the transition to university will be made that bit smoother by having a wide range of role models available to assist them on campus.

in profile

Professor Helen McCutcheon was appointed as Head of the School of Nursing and Midwifery at UniSA in late 2005, and is responsible for the undergraduate and postgraduate programs of over 2,600 students. Professor McCutcheon shares with us her observations on the impact that scholarships are having in the Division of Health Sciences:

"The School of Nursing and Midwifery is very fortunate to have a number of families and organisations providing scholarship opportunities for our students. The Park Family, St Andrew’s Hospital, Nursing Agency SA, Mutual Community and now Resthaven have provided and continue to provide many scholarships - without which many of our students would have struggled to meet the requirements of courses and clinical placements.

"I’m not sure that these generous families and organisations really know the significant difference their generosity makes to the students who receive a scholarship. The scholarship, grant or prize can mean paying rent while on placement, or buying textbooks rather than sharing the ones in the library, or even being able to afford internet access. Sometimes the simplest of things are often accepted as a norm, but to a financially challenged student a little support to pay for the basics, such as internet connections which can increase online study opportunities at home, means that they can commit to their course work at times that suit them, their family or their work life.

"The tangible difference this makes is usually reflected in the student’s overall performance and can move them from a student who is passing to a student who is doing really well. Our partnerships with these generous people are vital to ensure our students are provided with as much support as we can give them to ensure their success.

"Each year the numbers of applications and quality of applications for scholarships have risen and here at UniSA and in the School we are committed to doing all we can to provide a university opportunity for students to achieve their goals.

Professor Helen McCutcheon
RN, RM, BA, MPH, PhD
Head: School of Nursing and Midwifery, UniSA
Investing in future professionals

It is always a great pleasure to meet our donors and scholarship recipients. UniSA has been grateful for the support of a number of new organisations, whose welcome contributions will assist students across a range of courses from 2011. The Difference asked representatives from three organisations providing scholarships two questions:

1. What has inspired you to provide the scholarship?
2. What achievements or results would you like to see come from the scholarship?

Richard Hearn, CEO, Resthaven

“Resthaven wanted to make a gift with lasting benefits to the South Australian community through investment in our 75th anniversary scholarships. The objective is to advocate to students the importance of working with older people; it is good work that makes a significant contribution to the community. Older people have shaped this nation and deserve quality care and support from highly skilled and dedicated staff. Celebrating and affirming that older people are valued and respected is vital, as is affirming the good and essential work of staff, volunteers, carers and family members. We hope that the scholarships will encourage students to consider the rewards of working with older people. Strategically, this offers the potential to attract and maintain the quality of workforce we need now and in the future, by opening up to students the potential of a rewarding career in aged care.”

Sophie Doyle, Director, Business Development, Minter Ellison Lawyers

“The Partners and staff of Minter Ellison have a long history of supporting people in need in the local community. We strongly believe in creating opportunities for all members of society. This is why we approached UniSA about providing a law scholarship that supports students from backgrounds that are currently under-represented in the local South Australian legal profession. The scholarship will not only provide financial assistance to the student during their degree, it will also give the student access to lawyers from within the firm. We would like the recipient to develop a practical understanding of the legal profession not only through their study, but through their contact with a group of Minter Ellison lawyers who will share experiences and play a mentoring role with the student. By giving someone this opportunity, we hope that they can inspire those in a similar situation to go to university and pursue their dreams.”

Janene Schaefer, Registrar of the Surveyors Board

“The organisation of Surveying SA has been formed with representation from Surveyors Board of South Australia, Surveying and Spatial Sciences Institute, Spatial Industries Business Association and the University of South Australia, in order to increase the number of Licensed Surveyors in South Australia. Surveying SA’s mantra is to provide opportunities for students to become professionals in the Surveying and Spatial Industry. Scholarships provide students with an added catalyst for excellence, nurturing the interest of tomorrow’s industry professionals to ensure sustainability for the profession.

We hope the scholarships motivate students to excellence in their scholastic achievement in the field of Surveying and Spatial Science, and to become tomorrow’s innovators. In addition, we hope to increase the awareness of the surveying profession, especially to an audience who may not have been exposed previously.”

For more information about establishing a scholarship please contact Jo Sharp, Development Officer (Corporate & Named Scholarships) by email jo.sharp@unisa.edu.au or by phone on 8302 7634.

Mid-year progress report

At this year’s Scholarships and Grants Ceremony, UniSA Chancellor, Dr Ian Gould was delighted to present the inaugural Ian Gould Experimental Science Honours Scholarship to Debra Gent. The scholarship was established to encourage the ‘hands on’ approach to science and research, and to engage students in experimental work, data collection and analysis. As part of the presentation Dr Gould was able to ask the recipient, Debra Gent, about her decision to undertake research into the decline of anaerobic capacity with ageing and the breakdown of type II skeletal muscle fibres. Debra is currently completing her Bachelor of Applied Science (Honours) and collating data for her thesis entitled Age-related declines in physiological performance parameters in trained cyclists aged 35-64: How does muscle power change with ageing? Debra recently provided a progress report on her research and thesis to the Chancellor and advised that she is making steady headway. Her excellent results of two high distinctions and a grade point average of 6.5 (out of 7) indicate this is quite an understatement!

“This year so far has been an amazing rollercoaster of experience for me. I am still a bit in awe of how far I have come this year. At this point, my data is looking really good, with a sample size exceeding what I originally intended and a stronger than predicted change from zero, I am seeing some interesting significant changes in a number of different variables.

“The scholarship has provided me with an amazing opportunity to focus solely on my studies without the added pressure of part-time work. I have therefore been able to spend extra time on my data collection to ensure my research produces valuable results.

“I would like to thank Dr Ian Gould for his generosity in establishing this scholarship and recognising the importance of experimental science.”

Dr Ian Gould with Debra Gent at the 2010 Scholarships and Grants Ceremony.

Mid-year progress report

At this year’s Scholarships and Grants Ceremony, UniSA Chancellor, Dr Ian Gould was delighted to present the inaugural Ian Gould Experimental Science Honours Scholarship to Debra Gent. The scholarship was established to encourage the ‘hands on’ approach to science and research, and to engage students in experimental work, data collection and analysis. As part of the presentation Dr Gould was able to ask the recipient, Debra Gent, about her decision to undertake research into the decline of anaerobic capacity with ageing and the breakdown of type II skeletal muscle fibres. Debra is currently completing her Bachelor of Applied Science (Honours) and collating data for her thesis entitled Age-related declines in physiological performance parameters in trained cyclists aged 35-64: How does muscle power change with ageing? Debra recently provided a progress report on her research and thesis to the Chancellor and advised that she is making steady headway. Her excellent results of two high distinctions and a grade point average of 6.5 (out of 7) indicate this is quite an understatement!

“This year so far has been an amazing rollercoaster of experience for me. I am still a bit in awe of how far I have come this year. At this point, my data is looking really good, with a sample size exceeding what I originally intended and a stronger than predicted change from zero, I am seeing some interesting significant changes in a number of different variables.

“The scholarship has provided me with an amazing opportunity to focus solely on my studies without the added pressure of part-time work. I have therefore been able to spend extra time on my data collection to ensure my research produces valuable results.

“I would like to thank Dr Ian Gould for his generosity in establishing this scholarship and recognising the importance of experimental science.”

Dr Ian Gould with Debra Gent at the 2010 Scholarships and Grants Ceremony.

Mid-year progress report

At this year’s Scholarships and Grants Ceremony, UniSA Chancellor, Dr Ian Gould was delighted to present the inaugural Ian Gould Experimental Science Honours Scholarship to Debra Gent. The scholarship was established to encourage the ‘hands on’ approach to science and research, and to engage students in experimental work, data collection and analysis. As part of the presentation Dr Gould was able to ask the recipient, Debra Gent, about her decision to undertake research into the decline of anaerobic capacity with ageing and the breakdown of type II skeletal muscle fibres. Debra is currently completing her Bachelor of Applied Science (Honours) and collating data for her thesis entitled Age-related declines in physiological performance parameters in trained cyclists aged 35-64: How does muscle power change with ageing? Debra recently provided a progress report on her research and thesis to the Chancellor and advised that she is making steady headway. Her excellent results of two high distinctions and a grade point average of 6.5 (out of 7) indicate this is quite an understatement!

“This year so far has been an amazing rollercoaster of experience for me. I am still a bit in awe of how far I have come this year. At this point, my data is looking really good, with a sample size exceeding what I originally intended and a stronger than predicted change from zero, I am seeing some interesting significant changes in a number of different variables.

“The scholarship has provided me with an amazing opportunity to focus solely on my studies without the added pressure of part-time work. I have therefore been able to spend extra time on my data collection to ensure my research produces valuable results.

“I would like to thank Dr Ian Gould for his generosity in establishing this scholarship and recognising the importance of experimental science.”

Dr Ian Gould with Debra Gent at the 2010 Scholarships and Grants Ceremony.
Sheila Bailey and UniSA have a special relationship. Sheila works at UniSA, her son works and studies at UniSA, while her husband, sister and future daughter-in-law are all UniSA alumni. Sheila is a valued UniSA donor, having now established three annual student prizes in her name which she finances through workplace giving. She has also left a bequest to UniSA in her Will. The relationship Sheila has with her workplace is obviously special, and it is equally obvious that Sheila is a caring and generous person, concerned with making a difference to other people’s lives, and giving a helping hand where she can. So let’s find out more…

Born in Scotland, Sheila moved to South Australia with her family when she was aged four after her father took up a position as a naval architect in Whyalla. After completing her high school days at Whyalla High School, Sheila started working for BHP as an administrative clerk rather than follow her dream of becoming a teacher.

Sheila married and with her husband and two sons moved to Sydney. Following her return to Adelaide, Sheila began working at UniSA in 1997 undertaking casual data entry in the Alumni Office. Sheila’s career continued to grow and she is now the Development Coordinator (Alumni).

Over the years UniSA has become an extension to Sheila’s family life – she respects and trusts the University in its delivery of world-class teaching and research, and is proud to see the continued expansion of programs, research outputs, as well as the growing number of highly skilled graduates making their way into the world. Sheila is continually impressed by the passion and hard work of so many academics, professional staff and students working together to achieve great things. Sheila has also seen the huge difference that scholarships, grants and prizes make to disadvantaged students and for many years supported the University’s annual appeal. UniSA’s introduction of the option for staff to make donations to UniSA through regular payroll deductions provided Sheila with the opportunity to increase her giving.

In 2008 she created the Sheila Bailey Early Childhood Education Prize, valued at $1,000, which is awarded annually to an eligible South Australian student whose home is in a rural, remote or isolated area and who is enrolled in the second year of the Bachelor of Early Childhood Education program. So whilst Sheila was not able to realise her own dream of becoming an early childhood teacher, she now has the satisfaction of helping other students from similar backgrounds to realise their teaching ambition.

In 2009, Sheila created the Sheila Bailey Nursing and Midwifery Prize, also valued at $1,000. This prize honours her mother’s nursing career and was awarded for the first time in 2010. Then, after receiving expert physiotherapy help for sore knees from a UniSA-trained physiotherapist this year, a Sheila Bailey Physiotherapy Prize is now scheduled to be added to her growing philanthropic offering in 2011.

So Sheila really is a UniSA treasure: she gives 100% effort in her work, supports our students financially in her lifetime, plans to pass on her wealth to provide financial help after she dies, and knows that a UniSA education truly does transform people’s lives. In return, Sheila enjoys meeting her prize recipients, talking with them at the awards ceremony and participating in events specifically organised for the Chancellor’s Club, UniSA’s bequestor and major donor group.

Thank you Sheila, you are an asset and inspiration for UniSA.

Sheila Bailey – a UniSA treasure!

Kindergarten Training College, One Hundred Years 1907 – 2007: Memories of Graduates 1907 – 1957

Kindergarten Training College, One Hundred Years 1907 – 2007: Memories of Graduates 1907 – 1957, edited by Helen Miller and Pauline Butler for the de Lissa Institute Association of Early Childhood Graduates Inc. features the recollections of teaching during formative years in Australia. Miller and Butler interviewed graduates from the first 50 years of the College, many who are now well into their 90s, to record a social history of teaching and collate the experiences of a generation living through the depression, wars and then the growth of kindergarten teaching in post-war eras. This book beautifully captures the voices and memories of ordinary teachers in South Australia.

To get your copy of this exceptional book please call either Helen Miller on 08 8364 1261 or Pauline Butler on 08 8165 3927, or visit unisa.edu.au/alumni/netwk/delissa. Cost of the book is $25.00 plus postage and packaging.
University of South Australia is pleased to announce its special donors’ events for 2010.

A s the winter months disappear the Development Office welcomes the opportunity to coordinate an array of events designed to inspire and engage friends of UniSA. Looking back over the past few months, we are delighted with the number of new and regular guests that have braved the often wet and windy weather to participate in our events.

Chancellor’s Circle
The Chancellor’s Circle tours and seminars continue to draw strong interest. A mid-June tour of the School of Communication, International Studies and Languages enabled the University to showcase the brand new media and language facilities – the installation completed only days before the group’s visit. Professor Pal Ahluwalia, Pro Vice Chancellor: Education, Arts and Social Sciences, and Professor Kerry Green, Head of School: Communication, International Studies & Languages addressed the tour and provided an insight into the new teaching techniques employed by UniSA lecturers to create an innovative and interactive learning experience for students. Participants were able to see students preparing live television footage and programming the student radio station.

The Chancellor’s Circle events cover a diverse range of School facilities and topics throughout the year. The Chancellor, Dr Ian Gould, recently hosted a private viewing at the Anne & Gordon Samstag Museum of Art, where he acknowledged the number of bequests made to the UniSA art community, including Gordon Samstag’s remarkable gift which ranks as one of the most significant bequests to visual arts education in Australia.

The Chancellor’s Circle group were also offered the opportunity to hear from the Museum Director Erica Green, who explained the intricacies of the very intriguing exhibition Abstract Nature. The exhibition showcased the work of 20 artists, inspired by the forms and patterns of the Australian landscape and featuring an organic theme.

GWIS Film night
On Thursday August 19, over 80 guests attended the UniSA fundraising screening of Matching Jack at the Nova East End Cinema. The guests were treated to an interview with the film’s young star, Tom Russell. Tom commented that making this film was an emotional experience - a statement that most of the movie goers attested to, as many reached for the tissues...

We are delighted to advise that this fundraising event raised almost $2000 in support of the Gavin Wanganee Indigenous Scholarship.

Donors’ thank-you events
By invitation only, recent UniSA donors will be invited to join senior members of University staff for a special premier viewing of a new exhibition, A Generosity of Spirit Recent Australian Women’s Art from the QUT Art Collection, at the Samstag Museum on Thursday October 21. The Guest Speaker will be Stephen Rainbird, curator of the exhibition.

Successful Ageing seminars
The 2010 Successful Ageing seminar series draws to a close with the final seminar to be held in December. The hot topic of The State of Ageing in South Australia will be addressed by Dr Alice Clark and Professor Andy Gilbert from the Quality Use of Medicines and Pharmacy Research Centre at UniSA, who will look into the role of the community in supporting an ageing population. Resthaven, as a sponsor of a number of 75th anniversary scholarships, will also be represented at the seminar and will be promoting the role of older people in the community.

For those wishing to catch up on this year’s seminars about social media, planning for an active retirement, and the financial situation after the GFC, speakers’ notes and presentations are available on our website. We thank our two seminar sponsors for 2010, Statewide Super and Perpetual, for their support and very informative guest speakers.

Constance Gordon-Johnson Prize
This year for the Constance Gordon-Johnson Prize, Sculpture and Installation finalists will be exhibiting as part of the Bachelor of Visual Arts Graduate and Honours Exhibitions. The prize will be presented at the exhibition launch on Wednesday December 8. The Prize acknowledges outstanding achievement, and is awarded to a student on the strength of a body of work presented for selection. Be sure to add this date in your diary and come along to see some inspirational art work from the graduating students of UniSA.
Student Placement Grants changing the lives of many UniSA prides itself on incorporating real-world experience into academic study which maximises learning outcomes and enhances career opportunities. Professional experience placements help to develop the students’ knowledge in their chosen profession as well as provide them with the practical experience to confidently enter the workforce. However, the costs associated with completing a placement put the students and their families under considerable stress. Students often struggle to pay two sets of rents or even have to give up their part-time work to complete a placement.

Simon Ostrowski, a first year Masters of Teaching (Middle and Secondary) student who undertook a two week placement at the Mount Gambier High School. He knows first-hand how enriching the experience is, not only educationally but emotionally through the opportunity to build strong relationships and support networks with other teachers.

“I know that I speak for all rural placement students when I say that sharing our diverse teaching experiences following each school day was a resource that simply would not have been possible outside of the rural placement. Having a real family of fellow pre-service teachers to offer support, advice and encouragement was an unexpected, but invaluable aspect of my placement,” Simon says.

Simon had to take two weeks off work to go to Mt Gambier but was fortunate to receive a $1,000 rural placement grant which covered his accommodation, meals and living expenses.

“I would strongly encourage donors to support placement grants because the practical experience that I gained goes beyond anything that can be taught in literature reviews or lectures, and I am very grateful for the opportunity,” he says.

You can help a UniSA student complete their professional experience placements by supporting this appeal. Please send your donation now!
Hawke Centre Events

2010 Annual Hawke Lecture
Professor Geoff Gallop AC, Director,
Graduate School of Government
The University of Sydney
Wednesday 13 October, 6pm
Adelaide Town Hall, 128 King William Street
For further details of the Hawke Centre public program or to register your attendance, visit: hawkecentre.unisa.edu.au

Duguid Memorial Lecture

2010 Duguid Memorial Lecture
Associate Professor Dennis McDermott
The Uncomfortable Road to Cultural Ease: Shifting Focus to ‘Close the Gap’.
Friday 29th October 2010, 6pm
Flinders on Victoria Square, 182 Victoria Square
To register your attendance, visit: unisa.edu.au/giving/default.asp

Knowledge Works

Upcoming seminars in October, November and December 2010. For full details of UniSA’s free public lecture series and for registration details, visit: unisa.edu.au/knowledgeworks

Kerry Packer Civic Gallery

Guest Installations

chART
14 October – 22 November 2010
Mon-Fri 9am – 5pm
Level 3, Hawke Building, City West Campus

scosa Celebrates: Having a Ball
24 November – 5 December
Mon-Fri 9am – 5pm
Sat & Sun 2pm – 4pm
Level 3, Hawke Building, City West Campus

Samstag Museum Exhibitions

Abstract Nature
30 July – 8 October 2010
Gallery 1 – 3, Hawke Building, City West Campus

Other side art: Trevor Nickolls, a survey of paintings and drawings 1972 - 2007
22 October – 17 December 2010
Gallery 1, Hawke Building, City West Campus

Generosity of Spirit: Recent Australian Women’s Art from the QUT Art Collection
22 October – 17 December 2010
Bestec Gallery 2 & Gallery 3
Hawke Building, City West Campus

Successful Ageing in Australia Seminar Series

Health Issues – State of Ageing in SA
Dr Alice Clark & Professor Andy Gilbert
Quality Use of Medicines and Pharmacy Research Centre, UniSA
Richard Hearn, CEO, Resthaven
Friday 3 December 2010, 2pm – 4pm
Barbara Hanrahan Building, BH2-09,
City West Campus
For further seminar information and to register your attendance, visit: unisa.edu.au/giving/news/successfulageing/

SASA Gallery

Bachelor of Visual Arts Graduate Exhibition Bachelor of Visual Arts Honours Exhibition
Including exhibits from the Constance Gordon Johnson Sculpture & Installation Prize finalists Exhibition launch:
Wednesday 8 December, 6pm – 8pm
Exhibition open daily
8 - 10 December 2010, 11am – 5pm

Graduation Ceremonies

Onshore International Students
Monday 20 December 2010
Adelaide Festival Centre

For more information on all the services, events and benefits available to Alumni of UniSA please call on 08 8302 0973 for your free copy of the 2010 UniSA Blue Pages or visit: unisa.edu.au/alumni/