The School of Psychology, Social Work and Social Policy is a young school. It was formed in 2010 following the amalgamation of two antecedent Schools the ‘School of Psychology’ and ‘School of Social Work and Social Policy’, which themselves date to the establishment of the University of South Australia in 1992.

In this brief time the School has achieved an outstanding research profile for its youth and size. This reflects the exceptional calibre and productivity of the School’s academic staff and the high standing of its professional staff.

In the 2012 Excellence in Research for Australia (ERA) rankings, the discipline of Social Work obtained a rating of 3 (world standard of research) and the discipline of Psychology a rating of 4 (above world standard of research).

The School’s research continues to be supported by its two research centres (Centre for Applied Psychological Research and Centre for Sleep Research [incorporating the Patient Safety Foundation and the Cognitive Neuroscience Laboratory]) and its research groups (Gender and Violence; Conservation Psychology; Psychology Education; Peace, Conflict and Mediation; and Social Policy).

The School has an enviable Higher Degree by Research recruitment and progression rate; it continues to be especially engaged with industry and, in particular, mining, aviation, health, defence, occupational safety, government and social policy, rural and remote and community welfare; actively involved with Cooperative Research Centres in Remote Economic Participation [Ninti-One] and Bushfire; bringing high quality international researchers and workshops to South Australia; and great publication and grant successes.

Highlights for the year include the election of Professor Dollard as Foundation President of the Asia Pacific Academy for Psychosocial Factors at Work, Professor Runciman and the Patient Safety Foundation together with colleagues at UNSW receiving $10,000,000 NHMRC Program grant, the inauguration of the Cognitive Neuroscience Laboratory, Dr Keagh receiving an SA Tall Poppy Award, the hosting by the School of the 2012 annual conference of the Australian Association of Social Work and Welfare Educators and winning the UniSA EASS Research School of the Year 2012.

The School has a strong record in winning national competitive grants.

The grants awarded in 2012 for commencement 2013 are:

ARC Discovery Project: Gendered violence and citizenship: the complex effects of intimate partner violence on mental health, housing and employment. Investigators are Professor S. Franzway, Associate Professor Ss Wendt, Dr N. Moulding, Dr C. Zufferey and Professor D. Chung. Awarded amount: $210,000.

NHMRC Project: TDP - 43 in the population in relation to dementia: relationships with clinical symptomatology and other key neuro-pathologies. Investigator is Dr H. Keage. Awarded amount: $228,817.

NHMRC Project: Can a Mediterranean dietary pattern improve cognitive health and psychological wellbeing? Investigators are Dr K. Murphy, Dr J. Bryan, Professor J. Hodgson, Professor C. Wilson. Awarded amount: $691,342.

We were partners in NHMRC Grant: Does adenotonsillectomy improve neurocognition in pre-school children with obstructive sleep apnoea? Investigators are: Professor K. Waters, Professor K. Lushington, Associate Professor C. Dakin (administered by the University of Sydney). Awarded amount: $990,144.

Professor Kurt Lushington
Head of School
School of Psychology, Social Work and Social Policy
It has been a pleasure to be Associate Head of School: Research for 2012. Our researchers address a wide range of topics that have local, national and international significance. I offer my thanks and congratulations to the staff for their outstanding work and commitment.

In 2012, the Australian Research Council conducted the second evaluation of Excellence in Research for Australia (ERA). The report provides the outcomes of the ERA 2012 evaluations, which applies to research undertaken between the 1st of January 2005 and the 31st of December 2010. The results were published on the 6th of December 2012 with Social Work ranking 3 (world standard) and Psychology a 4 (above world standard).

This is a deserved endorsement of our dedicated, research-productive staff throughout the School and other staff and the research degree students who directly or indirectly support our research efforts.

This report is a celebration of the research activity produced by the School of Psychology, Social Work and Social Policy at the University of South Australia. It showcases the nature and scope of our research interests and achievements. Staff are members of research institutes and centres within the University of South Australia including the Hawke Research Institute, Centre for Sleep Research, Centre for Applied Psychological Research, Research Centre for Gender Studies and the Social Policy Research Group.

The report summarises the main research activities of our staff and higher degree research students for 2012. Specifically, it provides information about our publications, grants, conference presentations, research supervision (PhD, Masters, Honours) and research administration.

The School of Psychology, Social Work and Social Policy has been in a state of growth over recent years which is reflected in new staff appointments and PhD student enrolments and completions. We currently have 68 PhD and 2 Masters by Research students enrolled within our School.

These students play a vital role in building research capacity and a vibrant research culture.

In 2012 our staff were listed as chief investigators on 3 NHMRC grants, 16 ARC Grants, 14 other externally funded grants, and many other research consultancies. Moreover, we produced in excess of 80 peer-reviewed publications. We also gave over 28 presentations at national and international conferences to further disseminate our research findings and build on our research networks.

Staff also continued to make significant administrative contributions to the research governance of the School and University showing their dedication to building research.

Finally, what is not evident from this report, but should be acknowledged, is the significant contribution by professional staff to the research culture of the School. Their support and work is essential to all research activities in the School.

Research Education

Our dynamic and stimulating research environment greatly benefits students wanting to explore contemporary social issues and solutions. Our research informs the content of our undergraduate and postgraduate teaching programs and where possible our students are given the opportunity to work on research activities, collaborating in multidisciplinary teams with industry, government and the professions.

Research Programs:
- Honours
- Master by Research
- PhD (Social Work and Social Policy)
- PhD (Psychology)

Research Centres

The School of Psychology, Social Work and Social Policy hosts two of the University's research centres.

The Centre for Sleep Research is a world leader in the field. Funded by UniSA as well as government and industry support, the Centre extends our understanding and perception of human performance, sleep and behaviour. It is the largest dedicated sleep research facility in Australia and features a state-of-the-art laboratory.

The Centre for Applied Psychological Research conducts high quality research to elucidate and promote well-being, quality of life and effective functioning in individuals and organisations in the community. The Centre is also involved in looking at strategies to deal effectively with social and psychological problems.

Research Groups

School researchers are also involved in the following groups:

The Social Policy Research Group focuses on issues of social justice and social policy, the impact of economic and welfare reform on disadvantaged groups in the community, inequality and social exclusion. Research areas include:
- Poverty, homelessness and social inequality
- Community capacity building and development
- Human services work

The Centre for Peace, Conflict and Mediation studies all types of conflict and promotes conflict transformation, mediation, dispute resolution and peace building. Research areas include:
- The Prevention of Abuse of Older People
- Peace, Mediation and Conflict Resolution
- Mediation in the Asia Pacific Region
- Peace building
- Conflict and bullying in schools
- Children, families and conflict

The Centre for Applied Psychological Research (CAPR) is committed to a research agenda that provides evidence about the importance of balance between workplace productivity and psychological health and safety. Our research concentrates on psychological risks and psychological safety at work, stress, bullying and harassment and social exclusion from work.

We generate and apply new knowledge to make work environments throughout the Asia Pacific more accessible, healthier, safer and more productive. Engagement with external organisations and industry ensures we generate a real-world impact with our research.

The Centre is also home to the Work and Stress Research Group, The Australian Workplace Barometer and the Stress Café.

The research we conduct aims to be of value in dealing with social exclusion, stress, distress, life changes, anger and a range of problem behaviours. We aim to develop the highest quality applied social and psychological research to benefit the family, community and industry.

We approach our research from a number of angles:
- identifying psychosocial risk and risk groups
- evaluating interventions, actions and campaigns
- informing prevention policies and practices
- setting priorities for policies and interventions
- benchmarking at a national and international level
- monitoring changing trends, legislation and new developments
- supporting research on specific topics
- developing national standards
- forecasting emerging risks
- developing new technologies

Current research:
- State, Organisational and Team Interventions to Build Psychosocial Safety Climate
- Helping retail employees deal with threatening situations at work: Coping with acute and chronic stressors
- Developing and testing a best practice model of enterprise bargaining in the retail sector
- Back from the edge: reducing and preventing occupational stress in the remote area nursing
- Transition from school to work: A 10-year longitudinal study of unemployment, underemployment, social exclusion and mental health in young people
- Working wounded or engaged? Australian work conditions and consequences through the lens of the Job Demands - Resources Model
- Aged Care Injury Prevention Study
- Factors affecting sickness and stress related absence within SAPOL

CAPR has established national monitoring of psychosocial risk factors at work within Australia and influenced the design of surveillance systems internationally. Initially, the CAPR team published an international overview of national surveillance of workplace psychosocial hazards (Dollard, Skinner, Tuckey and Bailey, 2007). Since then, the Norwegian National Institute of Occupational Health followed the review paper’s recommendations when setting up the national surveillance system in Norway and the recommendations were also featured in the 2010 World Health Organization overview of the health impact of psychosocial hazards at work. Importantly, surveillance of psychosocial working conditions in Australia has also been established in line with the review guidelines through the Australian Workplace Barometer (AWB). Previously no comprehensive data were available. Using the AWB tool, data have been collected from over 4,200 Australians. The AWB received funding and support through an ARC Discovery grant, an ARC Linkage grant and from SafeWork SA. The Australian Workplace Barometer research, for the first time, has set national standards for work conditions and was heavily cited by SafeWork Australia in their submission to the Australian Government Parliamentary Inquiry on Workplace Bullying. The team led by Professor Maureen Dollard includes Ms Tessa Bailey, Dr Sarven McLinton, Dr Michelle Tuckey, Professor Tony Winefield, Mr Wes McTernan and Ms Penelope Richards.

The project has been awarded by DEASS as the Best Collaborative Engagement for 2012.
The Centre for Sleep Research is a world leader in its field, working to extend our understanding and perception of human performance, sleep, fatigue and behaviour. As one of the premier sleep research facilities in Australia, we feature a state-of-the-art sleep laboratory. Our researchers are acclaimed leaders in their fields, with expertise in human sleep, biological rhythms, sleep disorders and shiftwork. We continue to build on our success and expand our profile domestically and abroad. We achieve this by continuing to undertake research with important real-life applications and through public education, training and industry consultation aimed at improving the world around us.

Each year we recruit third year, Honours and postgraduate (Masters and PhD) students from physiology and psychology programs to study at the Centre and work with our staff on various research projects.

The following general areas of our projects are:
- sleep and circadian rhythms physiology
- sleep deprivation and performance
- alcohol and driving simulator performance
- shiftwork field studies
- clinical sleep disorders research

Experts from the Centre for Sleep Research are available for consulting work and regularly advise industry on issues relating to
- Shiftwork
- Fatigue
- industrial relations
- Human factors
- safety management
- Workplace agreement
- worker participation

Our consultants are able to give advice on the formulation of fatigue and shiftwork policy consistent with the OHSandW legislation in each state and territory of Australia. Trained and skilled facilitators are able to assist you with strategic planning, intervention development and industry development.

We also provide practical guidance to organisations, employers, employees and families on how to eliminate or minimise the risks associated with shiftwork.

We've worked with over 100 major Australian companies such as Qantas, BHP, Mobil Industries Australia, The Kimberly-Clark Corporation, Pacific National Rail, Queensland Rail, National Rail and RailCorp. Our international client list is also varied and includes major air, rail and transportation companies.

Our PhD students are:
- Martin Basedow
- Stephanie Centofanti
- Malcolm Christie
- Douglas Drury
- Georgina Heath
- Cassie Hilditch
- Lauren Holloway

- Diana Cicua - Navarro

AUSTRALIAN PATIENT SAFETY FOUNDATION

The Australian Patient Safety Foundation Inc. (APSF) is a non-profit independent organisation dedicated to the advancement of patient safety. The APSF has provided leadership in the reduction of harm to patients in all healthcare environments since 1988.

The APSF Research Group currently includes four staff - Professor Runciman, Dr Tim Schultz, Ms Natalie Hannaford and Ms Anita Deakin. They are responsible for collection of patient safety reference material, analysis of patient safety data and production and dissemination of reports and peer-reviewed literature. The group is ably supported by Ms Kaye Dollman, personal assistant to Professor Bill Runciman and APSF Finance Officer, Ms Randi Cross.

COGNITIVE NEUROSCIENCE LABORATORY

The cognitive neuroscience laboratory investigates the relationships between the brain, behaviour and cognition. We share skills in electroencephalography and transcranial doppler recording and apply these physiological measures of brain activity to investigate questions about the nature of cognition in health and in a range of clinical conditions.

Our PhD students are:
- Dr Owen Churches
- Dr Hannah Keage
- Dr Mark Kohler
