“Since UniSA is a world-renowned, government-owned university, the quality of education and its reliability are second to none. Also, UniSA has a number of celebrated alumni across a variety of industries, which may guarantee some advantage for graduates in terms of job-seeking.

UniSA features high quality of teaching staff. Lecturers are highly accomplished in their own academic areas, so the lectures are informative and offer insights into the topics.

Every Master of Teaching student needs to complete three teaching practicums. The teaching practicum might be a little challenging for students who are not experienced, but each one of us was assigned a mentor from the University, a site coordinator, and at least one more mentor from the school who constantly supported us. We also received productive feedback from them, which is very beneficial to our future career.

I will be seeking a teaching position in South Australia after I graduate. The Master of Teaching program is acknowledged by the Teachers Registration Board of South Australia. I hope to teach Maths and Science in a secondary school to take advantage of my previous medical background.”
